Summer Reading Assignment Aesop's Fables Bartley World History 1

ISBN-978-1-4351-3630-4

A parable is a realistic, relatable story teaching a moral, a fable is a fantastical one.

We can relate to a farmer sowing seeds or a fisherman working in jesus' parables, but not to a fox or a cloud having a conversation in one of aesop's fables (or to a toy sitting in Andy's room in Pixar's fables).

A fable is a story that expresses a proverb.

Think of the best advice you've ever received, write it down, now think of a short story to express that advice in an unexpected way.

After reading through Aesop's Fables, I need you to create one of your own. Here's a step-by-step lesson plan for writing a fable:

Step 1: What moral would you like to teach? Talk with friends and family to come up with some ideas. (or choose from the examples below)

Step 2: Who will your characters be? How can you show that moral in a story? Remember fables typically use animals/non-humans to represent human traits. Try to use at least characters that will represent opposing qualities; this helps set up the conflict resolution within the fable. (do not use people)

Step 3: What problem must your characters solve? What problem must be solved in order to illustrate the moral?

Step 4: How does your fable end? What's the solution to the problem? Remember that at least one of the characters must learn the valuable lesson, or moral that you pre-selected!

Step 5: have fun with it! This is meant to be an entertaining way for you to enjoy your summer reading project. We will present these in class when we return.

(other students will act out your fable while you narrate) if you don't enjoy the story, chances are others won't either. (also make sure, as always, everything is SACS appropriate)
